Customers to have a login, one per business. Within this page there should be a tile type gallery with the main products.

The idea is we put the artwork together so its all ready to go, they can then click on a link to open up the proof for each product or each connotation of product. If they are happy with the proof they can select a quantity and price from the drop down box and add it to the basket.

If they would like to make changes it would be cool to have a “Need to make changes” call to action that they can click on and it has a pop up form for them to explain. If the pop up form can auto fill the product info and just have a notes box for changes that should work.

The client can the put items in the basket and once they have chosen everything they can check out. The system will then create a ticket for us to do the work. It would be great if it could auto invoice through Xero but I imagine that will be an issue so if it generated an invoice we can just copy it over.
